SOUTH LANGHORNE MILL LEVELLED, WITH LOSS OF OVER $30,000; SECTION RAZED RENTED TO OPERATOR OF SLIP FACTORY

Joseph Lippman, Operator, Unable to Give Any Cause for Fire—Explosion Hurls Tin, Lumber Into Air—Blaze Seen for Miles—Intense Heat Drives Firemen Back With Hose

SOUTH LANGHORNE, Feb. 23—Intense flames, shooting high in the air, and seen for miles, last evening razed the two-story frame section of a mill structure here, operated by Joseph Lippman as a manufacturing plant for silk underwear.

The building was an old land-mark, operated for years by the Eden Manufacturing Company, and which is now jointly owned by Sheriff William L. Stackhouse, Doylestown, and the estate of Jesse C. Everitt, Hulmeville. The section levelled to the ground is that part which was rented to Lippman; while still standing amid the burning ruins this morning is the brick portion, used for storage purposes by the owners, and which was unharmed by the blaze.

So intense was the heat that firemen could not keep to their posts at the hose, but were gradually forced into retreat to the street, some distance away. Sparks filling the air proved a menace to nearby homes, and guards were placed to prevent the start of any additional conflagrations.

Two companies placed hose lines in a cistern on the property, and pumped water from that source, while others secured a supply from the fire-plugs on Bellevue avenue from the borough water system.

So far did the flames leap that a large water tank, unused, which stood well above the top of the brick portion, was completely destroyed; and the flames licking about the corners of the building ate out the wood which boarded up the windows in the brick building, which section was saved because of location of fire-doors on both the first and second floors.

Lippman, who employed 30 to 45 women and girls from this area, states that his loss is between $30,000 and $40,000, on machinery, silk and finished goods. Five thousand dollars insurance was carried on the machinery, and goods was partly insured.

Lippman rented 6,000 square feet of floor space last September, this being the two floors of the frame "L." There he manufactured silk and rayon slips. The 43 sewing machines on the second floor were operated from a central shaft. Two cutting machines were on the first floor. This machinery, 700 to 800 finished slips and a large quantity of rayon and silk material were included in his loss, states the mill operator.

At the time of the fire, Lippman, who resides in Asbury Park, N. J., says he was attending a boxing bout in New York, and was first informed of the blaze upon his arrival in Trenton, N. J. He hurried to the scene of the fire, with friends, at 1.30. He had previously operated mills in New Jersey.

It was at about 9.30 that the fire was discovered. One of the first to notice the blaze was Edgar Seeley, Sr., Hulmeville, who was passing the site, hurrying to headquarters of South Langhorne Fire Company. Seeley attempted to sound the alarm, which it is claimed was not in operation. Firemen in the station were notified, they in turn sending the alarm to other companies. South Langhorne's truck being out of commission. When first discovered it appeared that the entire section was ablaze.

Among the companies responding were: Hulmeville, Langhorne, Parkland, Newtown, Newport Terrace, Cornwells Heights, Fallsington, Newportville, and Parkland, Newport Terrace and Hulmeville engines remained on the scene until two o'clock.

Inspection of the scene showed that equipment in the heater and boiler section is intact. It was near the heater that the fire-doors were located which prevented spread of the blaze to the brick part. During the blaze, firemen and spectators report a decided explosion. The mill operator informed that a quantity of cleaning fluid was in the mill, this probably being the cause. Tin, lumber, etc., were thrown high in the air by the force.

In the brick part of the structure the owners of the property had lumber, pipe, etc., stores, but these were undamaged.

The building loss is estimated at $3,000, this being covered by insurance. The portion levelled is 140x30 feet, two stories in height.

Just a few days ago a tinsmith placed a new roof on part of the building. Many employees did not know of the destruction of the mill until arrival for work this morning.

Brother, Sister Killed By Car

Philadelphia, Feb. 23—Barbara Biel-ing, 7, and her brother, Donald, 6, were killed, and a friend, Nancy Dean, 9, was injured today when they were struck by an automobile while skipping to school with clasped hands. The car, which contained five women, struck the children at an intersection one block from the Conwell public school. The women and the mother of Barbara and Donald, became hysterical, and were treated for shock by physicians.

Traffic Policeman Thomas Christwell reported the children were skipping across the street under his protection when the tragedy occurred. "I had my arms outstretched to stop traffic, but apparently the woman driver didn't see me," Christwell said.

The automobile, which, police said, was operated by Greta Zollhofer, had to be lifted from the bodies of the three youngsters. The father of the dead children is a plumber. He could not be located immediately.

MYSTERY OF WRECKED ARMY AMBULANCE SOLVED

Doylestown Garageman Gets Results After Vehicle Is Stored Four Months

DRIVER WAS DESERTER

DOYLESTOWN, Feb. 23—A mystery was solved here this week—the mystery of a wrecked ambulance of the United States Army, which has been stored in a local garage for four months.

The owner of the Hayman-Radcliffe Motor Company garage, where the vehicle was towed after a wreck, became tired of having the car take up room, and furthermore no fee appeared forthcoming.

"Why don't we do something about that ambulance?" a department head said to a member of the firm one day last week. "We need the room and the ambulance is still badly wrecked."

G. Thawley Hayman, a member of the firm, dropped a line to the United States Army, Washington, D. C., asking that some action be taken to either have the ambulance repaired or removed.

No letter followed, but a Captain from the Army headquarters appeared on the scene the other day with a mechanic.

"Well, this solves the mystery, Mr. Hayman," the Captain remarked. "This ambulance was stolen by a deserter from the United States Army at Fort Hoyle, Maryland, and we have not been able to locate the deserter or the ambulance until now."

More Press-Smearing Planned

Washington, Feb. 23.

IT may be shocking but should not be surprising that there are in the United States Government, as now administered, individuals who believe that the economic system under which we live has failed and that the people will be better off if it should be scrapped and another devised for them.

IT IS not charged that either Mr. Roosevelt or Mrs. Roosevelt believes that. But it is clear that the utterances and policies of the President and the well-intentioned but highly injudicious sympathies and associations of his wife have brought to the support of the Administration many who do thus believe, convinced them that the New Deal is aimed in their direction. Communist organs and orators have proclaimed exactly that. They supported the New Deal on that ground in 1936 and in 1938.

IT is also undeniable that the Communist leaders were the first to demand a third term for the President. To be specific, Mr. Earl Browder thus went on record many months ago. The theory of Communist support—which, despite personal denunciation in the Daily Worker since the Hitler-Stalin pact, he still has—is very simple. Their conviction, identical with Mr. Roosevelt's in 1932, is that the piling up of national debt and continued deficit financing ultimately will result in national bankruptcy. That is a goal which Communists consider eminently desirable. Hence, their enthusiasm for the New Deal spending policy.

THEIR position is entirely logical. Mr. Roosevelt changed his mind

Fire Damages Roof of House On The Mekilaits Farm

The fire was discovered at four p. m., by an employee of Mekilaits, who resides in the structure. The damage was confined to the section near the roof on the second floor, the rafters igniting.

Fathers, Sons See The "Gospel Ship" Assembled

HULMEVILLE, Feb. 23—A "Gospel Ship" was assembled by Dr. George Paul Beck, Philadelphia, last evening, for the enlightenment and enjoyment of the 63 attending the Father and Son dinner in Epworth Hall of Neshaminy Methodist Church. Dr. Beck, pastor of Simpson Memorial Methodist Church, Philadelphia, was the guest speaker at the affair sponsored here by the official board, and attended by the fathers and sons of the church.

First laying the keel of the ship which is several feet long, Dr. Beck likened each part of the ship to those things which are a vital part of the life of a Christian. The sides of the craft, when placed, were termed the Old and New Testament; the sails represented the Trinity; the captain, the pastor; the pilot, Jesus Christ; the port-holes, the days of the week, with a red light at the seventh port-hole, as a "stop" signal for the Sabbath day. The anchor of Hope was attached to the ship.

Dr. Beck, who is much in demand with this lecture, is booked for two years in advance, and the local men and boys were pleased to be able to hear him.

Serving as toastmaster for the dinner program was the pastor of the Neshaminy Church, the Rev. M. R. Meredith. A welcome on behalf of the official board and Sunday School board was extended by C. Wesley Haefner. Group singing was accompanied by pianist, Albert Tomlinson; and instrumental selections were given by Charles Martindell, Donald Haefner, and Kimbel Faust, with Mrs. Samuel K. Faust at the piano. The numbers were "Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms," "Drink To Me Only With Thine Eyes."

The national colors were used in the plan of decorations, with bouquets of flowers decking the tables. Multicolored balloons were used, and favors were paper hats.

The Ladies' Aid members served the following menu: Tomato juice and crackers, creamed chicken in pattie shells, mashed potatoes, peas, cranberries, pickles, rolls, coffee, cherry ice cream, and hatchet-shaped cookies.

HOSIERY VALUED AT $3,340 STOLEN FROM FREIGHT STATION

17 Cases Missing From Bristol Station; Detectives and Police Busy

700½ DOZEN PAIRS

Consignment Was From Mfg. Plant and Dye Works in Croydon

Police officials here are confronted with the solving of the theft of 17 cases of silk hosiery, the cases which contained 700½ dozen pairs of stockings evidently being stolen from the Pennsylvania Railroad freight station, early yesterday morning.

When the local freight agent, Spencer Brown, arrived at the freight station, yesterday morning, the theft was discovered. The 17 cases had been consigned by the Blue Moon Hosiery Company and the Smith & Diamond Dye Works, Croydon, to the Sears-Roebuck Company, Philadelphia, with the exception of 61 dozen pairs, which were addressed to the Pomeroy Company, Harrisburg.

The total value of the goods is given at $3,340.50.

Bristol police, headed by Chief Linford J. Jones; Bucks County Detective Anthony Russo, and the Pennsylvania Railroad detectives were called in the case.

The thief or thieves had jimmied a door, it is claimed, evidently using a heavy bar to force the door and break the staple on the lock.

Company officials had left the station at six p. m., the theft being discovered by Mr. Brown when he arrived yesterday morning for his duties.

Neibauer Bus Company Increases Its Service

A change in the starting point of the bus line operated between Bristol and Newtown has been announced by the Neibauer Bus Company. Beginning Sunday, February 25th, buses on the Bristol-Newtown line will start at McKinley street and Route 13, instead of Market and Radcliffe streets. The change, according to an announcement by officials of the company, is to further accommodate patrons.

On Monday the service between Bristol and Newtown marked its first anniversary. The change that will be made on Sunday is the first to be made since the inception of this line on the Bristol end.

A company representative stated that the new service has been very favorably received during its first year of operation. "As the necessity arises for the extension of this line, or for further service to other points covered by our company, that change will be considered," the representative stated. "We are striving to serve the lower end of Bucks County in the best possible manner and will continue to do so," he concluded.

The change which will occur Sunday will mean that the entire town of Bristol will be offered better service on the Bristol to Newtown run.

Coming from Newtown the buses will proceed on Otter street to Mill to Radcliffe, to Walnut, to Pond, to McKinley street and Route 13. On the trip to Newtown the buses will leave McKinley street and Route 13 and proceed west on Pond to Walnut, to Radcliffe, to Market, to Pond, to Mill street and the Highway, and down Otter street.

There will be no change in the fare rates for this added service. New schedules may be obtained from the bus drivers.

RECOGNITION WELL DESERVED

Recognition of the services of Bristol firemen who have allied themselves with the Mercer County Blood Donors Association is well deserved. These men willingly respond when volunteers are asked for, and give of their blood in the effort to save the life of another. It is not unusual that this group should be recruited from among volunteer firemen, because it is such men as these who seem to be permeated with a desire to render service to others.

Just as these men, day or night, answer the call to fight fires in property of their fellow-men, so do they answer the call to give of their blood that another may be strengthened and given a chance to live.

It does seem a little strange that Mercer County, New Jersey, should call so often upon residents of another state for such service as blood transfusion, but it is presumed there is good reason for it. Either those with blood of the type desired are not available or some other cause is the reason Bristol firemen are so often sought.

The blood donors are to be guests of the Mercer County Blood Donors Association at an affair on Monday night, when the Association will try to give recognition to those who have given such unselfish service.

AT HOME ABROAD

It may come as a distinct shock to super-patriots of the United States that not all Americans are in America. A report of the State Department reveals that before the outbreak of the war sent thousands scampering for home, there were 409,306 American citizens making their homes abroad.

It is interesting to note that more than half the total, or 222,290, reside in Canada and Newfoundland. Europe is second with 103,241, including returned emigrants. Then follow Asia with 29,067; Mexico and Central America, 19,437; South America, 10,969; West Indies and Bermuda, 18,107; Africa, 3,917, including 130 in Ethiopia, and in far-off Australia there are 1,491.

Many of these expatriates, undoubtedly, are foreign representatives of American firms, but there must be thousands who, born under the star of adventure, have sought new experiences, new romances, new ideas of dreams to live out their lives. The American spirit of exploration is not a meaningless gesture. It is a continuation of the spirit manifested by those who climbed mountains and crossed deserts to open up the great Western territory.

And now that the United States is linked by every means of communication from coast to coast; now that there are few if any unexplored parts, the visionary citizen packs his few garments of civilization and takes himself to the Himalayas, to Tibet, to Pagan-Pagan in search of that indefinable thing he cannot obtain in cities of macadam and steel.

In a discussion of Grapes of Wrath, Governor Leon Phillips of Oklahoma is quoted as saying: "It is a fraud. It is a highly colored and overdrawn picture to sell a trashy book. I haven't and will not read it."

Of course only a low person would insinuate that Mr. Roosevelt is fishing for a new red herring for dragging purposes.

"SELF MADE GIRL" by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

CHAPTER XXXIII
Lawrie got out his pipe, and fished in both pockets for tobacco. "The next time I do it," he said, puffing as Linda held the match for him, "I'm going to have all new rubber. How many times did I change tires, Del?"

"About fifteen times."
"Fifteen? Jeese, I changed five times on that day we struck the cloudburst in—was that South Dakota, Del?"

"No, North Dakota. Oh, I don't know."
"Five times on that one stretch, and I gave you my word, not one day but that one fine went, and it was hardly a day we done two hundred miles I didn't have two, anyhow, I tell you, to come that far with no rubber is—"

Della was coming in with the sleepy child in her arms. He had red curls like hers, and he hid his face on her shoulder.

"Look up at your Aunt Linda! Come to your dad, feller!" Lawrie cried.

"No, he wants to stay with his mom," Della said.

Linda pulled her hat off of her head. She managed a smile. "Oh, he's too tired now. Put him back on the bed, Della, dear. And now tell me everything. Where are you bound for, and what are your plans, and how's everybody—and EVERYTHING!"

Della said: "Lawrie thought—he thought—"

Lawrie cut in. He said, "Sure I thought. Linda's doing good—look at the place she's got! I thought she could get me a job here. Why not?"

"Of course," Linda said, "a job. Naturally you want a job." She knew she was talking nonsense, but she couldn't help it. For the first time in her life she thought she was going to faint.

"I could sure use one," Lawrie said, "and I've come a darn long way to see about one. Things are sure bad out our way. The flood wiped out the fellow I worked with last year, and when Della said why didn't we come out here, I thought that was a pretty good idea. You're the only one who has made much, Linda. I don't see yet how you do it."

"I don't know any stenographers out our way getting all the dough you do."

"No? Perhaps you don't know any that work as hard as I do," Linda said. A thin icy shell was closing over her heart that a moment ago had ached with sympathy for this uncouth shabby stranger who had once been the brother she loved.

"Maybe that's right," he said, and the look he gave her was sly and questioning.

"Would you like a drink? I think there's some Scotch in the buffet, and ice in the icebox—"

"Thanks, I don't drink. I didn't know you did."

"I don't very often. However, I eat quite regularly. Are you hungry?" We'll see what we can find. I'm sorry it's the maid's day off."

She could have bitten her tongue. She'd never mentioned the maid in her letters home. They wouldn't understand.

"Oh, there's a maid," Lawrie said. "Well, you ARE pretty swell!"

about debt and deficits, but the clear-headed Communists, like the conservatives continue to believe that soon or late they will cause a great crash. It was inevitable that the spending policy which is the essence of the New Deal should draw to Mr. Roosevelt many who are dissatisfied with our system and believe they can improve on it. Some of these, as is well known, are close to the White House and hold official positions. They are not Communists and resent being so classified, but they make no secret of their feeling that capitalism has failed and that it is not desirable to "save business."

IT was pointed out here the other day that among these there is a belief that the best way to bring about the collapse of capitalism and thus promote their new "planned economy" is to sap the confidence of the millions of policyholders in the great insurance companies. To smear these is one part of their program. Another part, considered by some even more important, is to discredit the newspapers. In this the President personally co-operates. Almost from the start it has been Administration policy to throw mud on the American press. Following Mr. Roosevelt's example, members of his Cabinet have indulged in venomous tirades against the newspapers, published articles and looks, the aim of which was to undermine public confidence in the accuracy, fairness and integrity of the press. Discredited authors of defamatory volumes along this line have been taken up and coddled. Only those papers and writers slavish in their Administration support have been exempted.

ALL this plays the game of those who believe the system has failed and want to substitute another which cannot be told from a dictatorship. And, of course, it plays the Communist game, too. The "capitalistic press" is the stock Communist target. That it should become also the favorite target of a President of the United States, members of his Cabinet and of his so-called "inner circle" shows the real drift of the past seven years. Recently there have been signs that it is planned to intensify this campaign against the press in the months between now and November.

THE CHIEF reason seems to be the way in which newspapers, which, for eight years, have consistently supported both the President and the New Deal, now warn that twelve years is more than the American people want any President to serve and that a third-term attempt will end in disaster. There have been so many of these as to make it clear that practically a solid press will be against another term. To the ardent third-termers around Mr. Roosevelt this seems an overwhelming justification for a blanket indictment.

MR. ROOSEVELT personally leads the way in this. A short time ago, after the figures on public debt he gave out at Hyde Park had been shown up as absurd, he charged that the reporters had misquoted him and that the newspapers had mangled his figures and misinterpreted his meaning. They had done nothing of the kind. The reporters had taken his figures from his own stenographic record. They

Of course, she loved him. Every-thing was going to be all right. They'd be married right away, and Della and Lawrie would go away somewhere. Why couldn't she SAY SO? Why couldn't she TELL him—and get it settled—now—before it was too late?

"Lynn—you're crying?" She managed a smile through the tears. "I always cry when I—when I'm proposed to. Give me your handkerchief. Of course, I love you. I always have. I think you're sweet. Let's get married tomorrow!"

Linda was really tired when she got rid of Ned, and assured him that though she really wasn't quite up to driving to Reno, or flying to Reno to be married tomorrow, that she really would do it soon, and as soon as she had part of the work cleaned up she'd go home and go to bed, and he wasn't to call because she was going to try to get a good sleep.

With her future settled, she could go back to work, and concentrate. She could call Clarice, tell her to stay away for a few days—for there simply wasn't room for one more person in her little apartment. She could telephone trades people to send steak, and fruit and vegetables—everything Lawrie and Della and young Sonny might like to eat.

But when 6 o'clock came, and she walked the five blocks from the Senator's home to her own, she knew that, although her first fright was over, she was very much in the position of one who harbors fugitives. Not that Della and Lawrie were anxious to be hidden. Far from it! But her anxiety to hide them was overwhelming.

They were making themselves very much at home now. Della was singing as she prepared dinner in the kitchen, Lawrie had made himself comfortable on the sofa. The child played quietly with a shabby cotton dog, and some old magazines. The bathroom was hung with drying clothes.

"Have a good day?" Linda said. "Feel rested now?"

"Rarin' to go," Lawrie said, but he didn't lift his head from his best silk cushion.

"That's fine," she said. "You both look better, too."

were indignant, but helpless, at the President's denial of the facts. As for the editorial criticism, it was decently done and in the interests of truth. Yet, it brought upon the press another Rooseveltian denunciation.

NOR was this all. A short while later, the President at a press conference, used Justice Black's opinion in the case of the four Florida Negroes as a reason for declaring that the newspapers caught now to "apologize" to Mr. Black. This was an attempt to make it appear that the newspapers had been unjust to and untruthful about Mr. Black and that this opinion freeing these Negroes proved it. The President chose completely to ignore the facts upon which the press criticism of Mr. Black's appointment was based—to wit, first, that he was a fourth-rate Senator with nothing in his record to suggest fitness to sit on the Supreme Court; second, that he was named in a fit of Presidential pique due to the failure of the court-packing bill; third, that Mr. Black deliberately concealed his membership in the Klan and only admitted it after the covers had been pulled off him by a newspaper.

IT was typical that after dodging reporters here and abroad for weeks, when he finally replied over the radio, the bulk of his reply was a denunciation of the press. The press owes Mr. Black no apology, and no one knows that better than Mr. Roosevelt—and Mr. Black. This game of beating the newspapers has been practiced by politicians since there was a press to beat. But this is the first time it has ever been a major Administration policy. It is a tribute to the strength of the American press that seven years of such a policy should be so completely negligible.

LOOKING FORWARD

By Franklyn Waltman
Publicity Director, Republican National Committee

Turning his attention away from the affairs of Europe and back to our domestic problems, President Roosevelt the other day in a specially convened press conference undertook to defend the New Deal from criticisms that it has failed to do the job that was before it—namely, restore this country to a normal economic activity.

Glossing over the presence of an unemployed army of approximately 9,000,000 men and women after seven years of New Deal experimentation, Mr. Roosevelt made a statistical comparison between 1932 and 1939 in an effort to show that great gains had been made under the New Deal.

Admittedly great gains have been made since 1932—many of them despite the New Deal, instead of because of it. That is not the point at issue in this year's campaign. The point is that the New Deal has failed to restore this country to a level of economic activity necessary to raise the standards of living of all people. The evidence of that failure is the army of 9,000,000 unemployed—and Mr. Roosevelt cannot dodge that evidence with glib generalities and a manipulation of statistics.

Those men and women who have sought vainly for jobs in private industry these many years—those farmers whose income today is less than it was back in the late twenties when it was none too good—those hundreds of thousands of young men and women leaving school who find it impossible to get jobs and start careers—all of these will be little impressed by Mr. Roosevelt's recitation of statistics.

But since Mr. Roosevelt has resorted to the recitation of statistics, let us meet him on that ground. His first statistical defense, the Associated Press reported, is that national income has increased from 40 billions in 1932 to 68 billions in 1939, an increase of 71 per cent.

In the first place, the total of national income paid out—which is the proper figure to use—was not 40 billions in 1932. It was substantially over 46 billions. At no time in the last 20 years has national income paid out been as low as 40 billions. Yet Mr. Roosevelt persists in improperly using a national income produced figure in order to show what great gains were made under the New Deal.

Passing that distortion of the national income figure, what does Mr. Roosevelt's statistics really mean? Very little. As a special pleader, he is picking years that suit his purpose. It is just as unfair for him to compare 1939 with 1932—the year when a world-wide depression was at its bottom—as it would be for his opponents to compare 1937 or even 1939 with 1929—the year of an abnormal economic boom.

If we are going to be fair about this thing, we should use as a basis of comparison the seven years of Mr. Roosevelt's administration along with the previous seven years. On that basis we find that during the seven years from 1926 to 1932, inclusive, this country had an average annual national income of almost sixty-nine billions, compared to an average annual national income of slightly less than sixty billion dollars in the seven New Deal years.

In other words, our national income has averaged approximately nine billions a year less under the New Deal than in the previous seven years, despite the fact that our population meanwhile has grown several million.

Thus there is substantially less per capita income today than in the previous seven year period. Indeed national income last year—of which Mr. Roosevelt seems so proud, was less than in any year from 1925 to 1932 inclusive. It is even less than it was in 1937. Thus we are slipping backward—not going forward.

This indicates the fallacy of the conclusions which Mr. Roosevelt seeks to reach by just comparing 1932 with 1939. If space permitted other errors in his reasoning could be demonstrated. There is, however, one mistaken contention attributed to the President to which attention should be called.

The Associated Press dispatch said that "reporters asked for an amplification when the President said Government debt today was no greater than in 1932"—which seems a pretty amazing contention in face of the twenty-two billion rise in the national debt.

"Local, State, county and city debt is replied," the Associated Press dispatch continued, "had gone down the all extent that federal debt has risen in the meantime private debt has fallen off. Therefore, reasoned Mr. Roosevelt, the total debt has gone down."

So amazing is that contention as to leave the inference that Mr. Roosevelt was not being correctly represented. But the special correspondents of the New York Herald-Tribune, New York Times and other newspapers reported the same contention in substantially the same words.

Mr. Roosevelt obviously is in error when he contends that there has been an increase in governmental debt in his country—that the decrease in State and local indebtedness has offset the astounding rise in the national debt.

The annual report of the Secretary of the Treasury for the year ending June 30, 1939, gives the total of outstanding State and local securities that are wholly or partially exempt from the Federal income tax of June 30, 1932 as $19,330,000,000 and on June 30, 1939 as $19,626,000,000. These figures represent approximately the entire State, county, city and local debt, in other words, instead of decreasing, this indebtedness has slightly increased. Meanwhile the national debt has advanced approximately twenty-two billions.

The key to the extent of public indebtedness is to be found in the Treasury Department's tabulation of the grand total of all kinds of securities, interest on which is wholly or partially exempt from Federal income taxes, that is, outstanding Government indebtedness. The total given in the Secretary's report for June 30, 1932 was $40,782,000,000 and for June 30, 1939 the figure is $67,656,000,000—an increase of almost twenty-seven billions.

In the face of these official figures how preposterous Mr. Roosevelt's contention becomes! One of his smart young men must have handed him the wrong figures. But that is the sort of hokey which is being used now to defend the New Deal as the savior of mankind.

Bristol House-Wives Report Banishing Hard-Water Wash

Reporting that they now can turn out remarkable, snowy-white washes in spite of the hard-water problem, scores of Bristol women are enthusing over the special sale which introduced them to the soap that makes this possible.

Featured in Bristol grocery stores, the sale is known as the Rinsol "No Scrub" special. It features at bargain prices—the new, richer 1940 Rinsol, which licks hard water and banishes the unsatisfactory hard water wash forever!

Bristol shoppers say that the "No Scrub" special sale brought them considerable savings on their soap purchases, and gave them a first-hand acquaintance with the soap which helps them do a quicker, easier wash, with perfect, snowy-white results. They affirm the facts which millions of other American housewives are discovering, that the new 1940 Rinsol gives them up to three times as much suds as old-type bar and package soaps, makes clothes many shades whiter than the lazy soaps of recent years, and eliminates worrisome scrubbing. The special will be spotlighted in Bristol stores for several more days so that all residents may benefit by it.

First in the Hearts of its Countrymen

YOU don't have to look farther than the nearest parking lot to see how the public has taken to this 1940 Buick.

Although it is not the largest seller, polls of public opinion mark it clearly as the car "first in the hearts of its countrymen."

On general appearance, for instance, Buick gets better than a 19% vote as best looking, to 11% for the Number Two car.

Its thrifty Dynaflex power plant, now balanced after assembly, gives it twice as many Best-of-the-Bunch votes as any other, as does its chassis construction.

With soft and easy coil springs all around it's only natural that some two and a half times as many people pick Buick as best for ride. And a two to one vote on room is understandable in view of the SUPER's close-to-five-foot front seat. But the really satisfying thing to us is the way people size up Buick's value.

Half again as many people pick

The model illustrated is the Buick SUPER model 51 four-door touring sedan $1109 delivered at Flint, Mich. White sidewall tires additional.*

Buick as best buy as pick any other. And three out of five rate Buick No. 1 say it's the value that gives it the edge.

So it's not surprising when polls show more people wanting Buick than want any other car—and when Buick's midwinter sales hit new peaks.

And shouldn't that, in turn, logically suggest: better get yours now—and be sure of having it?

an informal manner of the great outdoors. He told many stories of the red and gray squirrels and of the migrant birds.

Mr. McKenney said that although the winter had been rather hard on some evergreens, the perennials were in good condition next spring because of the comparatively even temperature and the snow this winter.

At the close of his talk, Mr. McKenney presented a peony which he had raised and forced into bloom to the program committee chairman.

During the business session one new member, Mrs. Hershel Smith, Southampton, was welcomed.

Mr. Tuckey, Bustleton, chairman of the new plant species committee, gave a brief talk, during which he urged that the members of the society become familiar with the botanical names of the plants.

Briefly Mr. Tuckey explained how it was possible for him to have plants blooming in his house all winter. This, he said, was due to the fact that they were brought into the house at the proper time. The proper time of cutting, he said, also plays an important part in the blooming of the plants.

Mr. Tuckey informed the group that he brought his chrysanthemums into the house last November and that they bloomed until early last month. Forsythia, which he brought into the house in the fall, has also been blooming during the winter. During his talk last evening Mr. Tuckey displayed a japonica which he brought into the house last fall and which had been blooming during the winter.

At the next meeting, March 19th, Daniel McGowan, Banff, Canada, will show colored pictures of the Canadian Rockies. Mr. McGowan has spoken here on previous occasions, and the pictures he will show next month are those he recently took while making a tour of the mountains in Canada.

Bankers Convene In Session at Quakertown

There was the invocation by the Rev. Paul T. Stoudt followed by words of welcome by Charles H. Ort, esquire, president and trust officer of the Quakertown Trust Company. A reply to the words of greeting was made by Raymond W. Johnson, executive vice president of The Morrisville Bank.

Thomas A. Coe, Jr., Langhorne, told of the activities of the agriculture committee during the past year. Mr. Coe exhibited two cups and two plaques given by the association. One cup was awarded to James Howes, Penns Park, for being the outstanding 4-H club agriculture member of the county, while the other cup was given to Marion E. Shull, Newtown, for being the outstanding home economics 4-H club member. One plaque was presented to the Newtown 4-H Club for its agriculture work while the second plaque was given to the same 4-H club for its home economics advancement.

On matters of legislation Lester D. Thorne, Bristol, reported for his committee stating there had been little legislation pertaining to banking enacted by the recent legislature but that "there are several important pending measures which should be studied carefully."

One hold-up was staged at a Bucks County bank in the past year as reported by T. A. Crouthamel, Perkaskie. The hold-up was at the Dublin bank. Mr. Crouthamel reported that these bandits, due to the efficiency of the police of the county, had been captured and are now serving time. He also called attention to the apprehension of bad check passers and their subsequent turning over to the authorities of New Jersey, owing to the vigilance of Lester D. Thorne, Bristol, and "an outside bank officer."

The matter of having a new and improved highway between Bristol, in the lower end of the county, and Doylestown, was only briefly referred to by H. H. Reinhart, Quakertown, when he said "We have finally located a map with the proposed new road marked thereon. I report progress," stated Mr. Reinhart.

C. Wilson Roberts, Southampton, stated that booklets had been distributed among schools and Thomas B. Stockham, Morrisville, submitted the report of the publicity committee in which he outlined what had been done in the way of publicizing Bucks County. He urged more effort be made to stress Bucks County's low tax rate, the county's beauty, scenery and other attractions.

F. Cyrus Twining, Chalfont, reported for the "Bank Management and Practices Committee." He said the committee had held nine meetings at which seven addresses had been given, one meeting was of an entertaining nature and one an open forum. Treasurer, Henry Schanbacher, Dublin, submitted his report as treasurer of the association.

In his address dealing with matters pertaining to present day banking, O. Howard Wolfe, gave much information of an enlightening nature and of valuable interest to bankers. He took as his topic "Some Ideas on the Management of Bank Liabilities."

Following the report of the nominating committee the election of officers resulted as follows:

President, F. Cyrus Twining, Chalfont; vice-president, James J. Colson, Yardley; secretary, Walter K. Terry, Perkaskie; treasurer, Henry Schanbacher, Dublin. Those chosen for the executive committee were: D. H. Erdman, Quakertown; T. A. Crouthamel, Perkaskie; C. Wilson Roberts, Southampton; Lester D. Thorne, Bristol; H. H. Reinhart, Quakertown.

During the enjoyment of a turkey dinner there were musical numbers given and at the end of the morning session vocal solos were rendered by James Unangst, Quakertown.

As the finale of the day's program a professional entertainer delighted with his wit and humor, posing as a member of the Great Britain's Purchasing Committee in the United States.

Doron Green Speaks On The Life of Washington

out as an example for all to emulate." Mr. Green pointed out that in his research work in history, he found the "real history" recorded in the smaller towns and not in the records of the nation and large cities which give only facts and figures. "Here in the small towns we find the 'real history' of the life and thoughts of the people," he said. He remarked that during a visit with friends in Winchester, Va., he first picked up the "Footprints of Washington." In this small town, he was shown the small office building which was used by Washington to outfit the small company of men who were to accompany him on his first great mission in the service of his country, the trip to Fort Duquesne. "Here I stood in the footprints of Washington as a young man on the threshold of life," said Mr. Green. He also had the pleasure of drinking from the same well that Washington drank from during his stay in Winchester.

"A number of years later I took a trip to Canada, visiting Quebec and Montreal and returning through New England. While in Massachusetts, I visited Cambridge and was shown the tree under which Washington took command of the Continental Army. Here I stood in the footprints of the man who was destined to free his country."

"Again, during a visit to Valley Forge, I picked up the footprints at another stage in his life. Here I could not help feeling deeply impressed by the sacrifice and hardships that the men of the Continental Army had to endure, and by the spirit of the man who knelt down in humility to God to pray for guidance and deliverance."

Mr. Green then told of a visit to Bowman's Hill where he spoke with an old gentleman who acted as caretaker in the park. "In the course of conversation, I learned that Bowman's Hill was used as a lookout by Washington to observe the activities of the British forces at Trenton. I also learned that it was the loyal farmers of this area who went into Trenton to sell their produce to the Hessians and returned with information for Washington.

"During a visit to Washington, D. C., I visited Mt. Vernon, and wandered through the grounds and the house where Washington lived the life he loved so well, but which continued service to his country prevented him from enjoying to fulfillment. I could not help being impressed with thoughts of the greatness of this man, while visiting Mt. Vernon, his home."

"From the house I wandered to the Tomb of George and Martha Washington. Here I learned the story of how the tomb came to be built. It seems that about 30 years after Washington's death, Mt. Vernon was in a bad state of repair, due to neglect. This condition was made known to the press and a movement was launched to make Mt. Vernon a national shrine. As a result of this campaign, the new tomb was constructed and the remains of Washington and his wife removed from the old tomb."

"Here I stood before the mortal remains of the 'Father of Our Country,' but somehow I did not feel that his life and work was over, for surely the 'Spiritual Washington' still goes on and in that 'Eternal City of the Heavens' leaves 'Footprints in the Sands of Time' for us to follow."

Keith Rosser presented Mr. Green with a leather-bound and engraved copy of his own book, "This splendid copy," said Mr. Rosser, "is the gift of Exchange Club to honor Mr. Green for the service to the club, and to show appreciation to a man who, by sacrifice and service to church, the public schools, and the community has set himself up as an example for all to follow, and who in departing will surely leave 'Footprints in the Sands of Time.'"

Roy F. Fry, president of the Exchange Club, announced that the club, in appreciation of the high esteem in which Mr. Green is held, is presenting a copy of Mr. Green's latest book to each of the public and parochial schools of Bristol. Copies of these books were presented to superintendent Warren P. Snyder to distribute. Mr. Snyder accepted the gift for the schools and said that they will stand as a monument to Mr. Green. Mr. Snyder pointed out that Mr. Green's first book "The History of Bristol" was used extensively in the civics classes of the public schools.

Mystery of Wrecked Army Ambulance Solved

Later an Army sergeant came to the local garage and took the ambulance back to Maryland. The Army officials will now start a search for the deserter.

When the ambulance was wrecked here on the early morning of October 23rd, the operator, in Army uniform, told Officer Scott Case that his name was Stanley Kocian and that he had been transferred and was on his way to Wilkes-Barre with some medical equipment.

The equipment happened to be two suitcases in the rear of the ambulance, probably containing clothes. He took the two suitcases to the local express office the following morning and had them sent by express to a Pennsylvania town in the coal regions.

"Kocian" left town without having his license checked and the local garage was under the impression that the ambulance would be called for in a few days.

Today's Quiet Moment

(By Howard L. Zepp, Th. M.)

Lord, how many people there are around us who are living a selfish life that might be transformed into living sacrifices for Thee and their fellow men if we were only brave enough to speak the word which ought to be spoken. O Master, share with us Thine own spirit that we may have the courage to follow in Thy steps. Amen.

ON THE SCREENS

GRAND THEATRE

Blazing their way across the screen in a double-barreled barrage of thrills and comedy, a pair of Dead End Kids and the "Little Tough Guys" came to the Grand Theatre yesterday in the new Universal film, "Call A Messenger."

For the two Dead End Kids, Billy Halop and Huntz Hall, the picture proves a definite stepping stone to higher screen prestige.

The story concerns itself with the experiences of a band of alley kids who are forced to take jobs as messenger boys with a great telegraph company to save one of their number from going to reform school on a burglary charge.

BRISTOL THEATRE

"The Fatal Hour," which is playing now at the Bristol Theatre, is the fourth Wong picture made by Monogram with Boris Karloff as the star.

Like previous Wong films, "The Fatal Hour" is based on the adventures of James Lee Wong, Chinese detective, brain child of Hugh Wiley.

"The Fatal Hour" tells how murder strikes four times at the police department itself, with Wong called in by Captain Street when his best friend is murdered.

"Punkie" Zeffries tied the scoring record of the Bristol Basketball League as he rolled in 29 points to aid his team trounce the Falls Alumni quintet, 57-25, last night on the Mutual Aid court.

Zeffries had several chances to break the record, missing several hangers towards the finish of the contest. Two weeks ago, Duerr of Fallington, broke the record with the same number of points. In with Zeffries' mixture of points were a dozen of field goals and five out of six fouls.

By virtue of his high number of points, Zeffries again took the lead in individual scoring in the circuit, topping Ralph Cahall, of Rohm and Haas, who moved into first place this week. The regular scheduled league season ends next week.

During the entire second half, the Celtics scored but one field goal and four fouls and in the third session not one point was registered on the Celtics' side of the scorebook. Until then, the boys of Vito Della were still in the game.

FRANKLIN ELIMINATES FIFTH WARD CLUB FIVE

BRISTOL SUBURBAN LEAGUE
Result of last night
Franklin, 20; Fifth Ward, 18

Displaying a better passing attack and team-work, the Franklin A. C. eliminated the Fifth Ward Sporting Club from the playoffs of the Bristol Suburban League, defeating the latter, 20-18, in a hard-fought game played on the Italian Mutual Aid floor. Franklin now meets Third Ward in a three-game playoff series.

With two minutes to go, Fifth Ward possessed an 18-15 lead over Franklin and appeared to be certain winners. But a foul for Joe Cialella out of the Wards' lead a point and then "Pete" DeLuca shook the cords with a long shot and the count was deadlocked. With the hand of the clock turning around the last minute, Rocco Sagolla picked the ball out of a scrimmage and arched it into his basket for the winning double-decker.

The floor work of Cialella, DeLuca, and Palumbo was outstanding for the winners while DiAngelo and Capucci did good work for the undefeated team.

BRISTOL PASSERS WILL PLAY AT MORRISVILLE

MORRISVILLE, Feb. 23—Stripped of its usual significance the Bristol-Morrisville basketball clash scheduled for the Bulldogs court tonight loses much of its emphasis simply because Bristol already has the Lower Bucks Court crown tucked away before they take the floor. Not since 1935 has the title been captured before the final meeting of the two teams when Morrisville won the championship.

With the boys' tilt "de-emphasized" the spotlight tonight will be shifted to the contest involving the girls who will probably "steal" the show for the first time in many years. For upon the outcome of this scrap will rest Bristol's chances of winning their third straight Lower Bucks County League championship. A victory for the Cardinals will give them clear hold on the title, whereas a setback will probably mean they will have to share the honors this season with Bensalem, who plays Buckingham in their final tilt next week. In expectation of that coach Royer will have his strongest line-up to take the floor this evening in their last chance to clinch the title.

"SOUNDTEST INVESTMENT I EVER MADE!"

I CERTAINLY ENVY YOU THIS CAR, JOE. IT'S A BEAUTY!

YOU'RE RIGHT, BESS. DO YOU WONDER THAT THEY CALL IT THE MOST BEAUTIFUL THING ON WHEELS?

THESE WIDE SEATS ARE SURELY UNUSUAL. IN SUCH A ROOMY CAR, I'M GOING DOWN THE NEXT ROAD. BESS, AND SHOW YOU THE BEST RIDE ON FOUR WHEELS—IT'S TRIPLE-CUSHIONED!

ANOTHER THING THAT MAKES ME SUCH A PONTIAC ENTHUSIAST IS ITS EXTRA SAFETY—I KNOW WE'RE BETTER PROTECTED WITH PONTIAC'S TRIPLE-SEALED BRAKES, UNI-STEEL FISHER BODY AND HI-TEST SAFETY PLATE GLASS.

AND I GET THE BIGGEST THRILL OUT OF KNOWING IT COST US JUST A FEW DOLLARS MORE THAN THE LOWEST-PRICED CARS.

YES, I'LL ALWAYS BELIEVE THOSE FEW DOLLARS THE BEST INVESTMENT WE EVER MADE.
